FAREWELL

The time is now at hand when we seniors, we who for four happy years have been participators in the triumphs of our school and fellows in her disappointments, must take our leave.

We struggled, coaxed, and worked, finally passing. We wanted to get out; we swore by all that when we were through Central would see us no more. Now that we are actually through we find we are more sober, more sane. We find that high school was not only study and work. We find too, that Central has penetrated us—become a part of us.

The exhilaration of achievement with which graduation at present imbues us deadens the sorrow with which we part. But nothing can take away from us the joy of so many golden friendships, so many enriching influences, such fine training and useful instruction.

Each one of us now fares forth on his own separate path with something fine to look back upon, and something substantial with which to look forward to success. Let us never forget the things our Alma Mater has taught us, and let us bid her farewell with all the meaning the word implies. Farewell!

Evelyn Gryson.

THOUGHTS

"Write two editorials."

Two editorials? Never. Thoughts of graduation jam at the end of my pen—how can I divide these feelings into two editorials? It will be better for me to shorten what I write, and mean what I write.

The last months have been an elated, inflated period for the seniors—they've been glorious. Yes, I know: Undergrads and others will probably read this and take it as so much paper and ink; but can't you see that a farewell editorial cannot be original? Editors in Central for twenty years have experienced the same feelings, the same emotions; and editors in Central for twenty years have sent the same editorial copy to the printer—but none have been more sincere.

So Central, we take our endowments: memories of four years of being proud to boast of you, defend you, and carry your revered name on our lips. Notice, Central, that some lips quiver, and the rest of us have that feeling inside.

We will leave and our group will disintegrate: but no matter how far we stray, we will always be sons and daughters of Our Lady On the Hill.

Ninger.

FREEDOM

At last we are free—free—on our own. The moment so long awaited has arrived, and with its feeling of freedom comes one of fear. What awaits us in this hard, cruel world? Laughter? Tears? Happiness? Who knows? Has it not been said that life is what you make it? Then why fear?

For we, we shall set this earth spinning faster in its orbit with our flames of ambition and the fires of our deeds. But like the slave freed from his shackles, after the first ecstatic moment of joy, reason comes and is closely followed by hopelessness, disillusion, anxiety and fear.

Life will begin to hammer its blows, each one seeking to quell that spirit of youth. With sickening shock the realization will be brought home that no longer will Mother and Dad be there to support, aid, and comfort; and no longer will the school be there to lend that protecting, helping hand to guide our faltering steps. We are children no more—we are on our own and must take the consequences. With faces turned to the sun and hearts upturned to God we face life, tingling in every fiber of our being with these fears, hopes and ambitions. And we are bidding adieu to one chapter of life which will be closed forever.

Emily Kellerstrass.

A WORD TO THE WISE

Too many students think their education has finished when they graduate from high school. Their first emotion is one of tremendous freedom—based on the creation of new connections, and greater and more lasting contacts with the outer world. They feel they have exhausted the years allotted to “learning”—they have left behind the hours of study.

No one was ever greater—or more sadly—mistaken. There has never been a person who was so successful that he outgrew the power to grow. Education is the training of the moral and intellectual faculties, not the years spent at school. The most educated man realizes that he can never be truly educated; that there are vast numbers of things with which he can never become acquainted.

Remember what a fool the man was who said, “There are no new worlds to conquer.” Think of the marvelous things we have today, and then think how paltry our civilization will seem five hundred years from now. The secret of Man’s tremendous achievements is that he has never lost the power to grow.

Don’t let your education stop now. It has barely begun. Let’s make ourselves as interesting as possible so that we shall never become bored with our own society. Let’s be twentieth-century crusaders for education!

And hats off to the great Chinese who said: “The wisest man can never know one-tenth as much as the fool does not know.”

Dorothy Esterly.

A SPORTS EDITOR’S EDITORIAL

When we, four years ago, heard in our subconscious minds the cry “Batter Up!” and, responding to the call, straightened our shoulders, picked up our pencils and rulers and walked to the plate, we had no idea of the joys and sorrows we were to experience in the game of High School; no idea of the times when, discouraged by a “strike-out,” we would shrug our shoulders and walk back to the bench muttering “It isn’t fair;” no idea of the exhilarating experience of hitting a home run—getting promoted—drawing ever nearer to the last inning—the DIPLOMA.

Perhaps we should have swung to better advantage at the easy balls—perhaps we might have made more runs—added more points. Perhaps . . . But why go on—the game is over. We have, according to our own standards, either won or lost. The score is ours.

But that was only a practice game. Our opponents proved to be our benefactors. Now we have a bigger game to play—the Game of Life. In this game we must not shirk; we must not overlook any opportunity, no matter how small. We must play fair. Our rewards will be individual—money, position, or perhaps just quiet happiness.

Helen Lehmkuhl.

SENIOR SERIES

I

Poignant Portrait

Some guys are quickly forgotten,
And gone at the close of the day,
But the guy we will always remember
Mixed our shredded wheat with hay!

II

Harmless Hypothesis

We realize teachers are needed,
And their talents reach to the sky;
We know that they serve a purpose,
But why have ‘em at Central High?

III

Pitiful Publicity

The senior came to give his speech,
He’d practiced right and left.
The Tangent had got wind of it:
And he was audienced—bereft!

IV

Freshman’s Future

He was a shriveled Freshman,
His feet were made of clay.
Now he’s a mighty Senior . . .
So you will be some day!

V

Rightful Retrocession

The teacher was a nightmare
With homework up her sleeve . . .
If this is civilization,
Why wasn’t I born Eve?

VI

Fated Folly

He needed A’s on his report
His papa had been firm.
So he brought teacher an apple—
But the apple had a worm!

VII

Cash Calamity

Six weeks he labored for the price
To buy his girl a bouquet;
But he was a Central Senior
And his class took it away.

VIII

Querulous Question

They shot some men of history,
They hung a couple, too.
But what about the textbook-writers,
Who bother me and you?

Dorothy Esterly.

From Principal to Parent

May 29, 1936.

Dear Parents:

Our span of life is filled with joys, trials and tribulations during the training necessary for continuous, unified education and for its educational integration in the naturally diversified life of individuals. It is necessary that definite, dynamic controls of knowledge, impulses and inner urges be acquired through self-discipline.

Self-discipline in life is like the brakes on a train, useful when applied if going in the wrong direction and useless when moving along normally. Self-discipline is a real life power, producing the development of self-restraint and self-denial. It makes us know ourselves and become aware of our reserves and resources. It makes us fit for trusting ourselves to ourselves, for the larger outlook of existence and service. It makes us fit to cope with life problems in unexpected emergencies furnishing presence of mind and the will-power to do our very best at all times.

Yours truly,

William Weiner Principal.

We, the talented, clever, delightful graduates of the class of June, 1936, being of sound mind (!#-¾%!) and disposing memory, do hereby declare this our last will and testament. (We don't like the first four letters of the last word!)

Item: To the school, the pleasant memory of our ever-smiling intelligent faces.

Item: To the class of January 1937, we leave the impossible task of taking our places with the bereaved faculty.

Item: The cracked walls that signify you have reached the fourth floor.

Item: The two lunchrooms—closed when you have a nickel to spend.

Item: The dog-eared texts of which we have absorbed everything. (Dear Editor: A little one like this won't hurt, will it?)

Item: The windows in the little halls behind the stairs. (Perfect rendezvous.)

Item: The elevators—and if you can snitch rides on them, you're professional—we never could.

Item: The long auditorium periods that give the faculty (?) a break.

Item: Miss Gordon's penny late-slips, and our place in line by her desk.

Item: Dr. Goldstein to help you with your 4A speeches, and Mr. Miller to collect your money.

Item: Mr. McMillin's anecdotes beginning: "When I lived in Philadelphia."

Item: Last days of old terms. (You can enjoy these more if you have the right theatre programs.)

Item: To the Freshies, the halls where our feet trod to fame.

Item: To the Class of January 1937, the Indian head penny left us by the class of January, 1936.

Item: To the next 4A speakers we leave the microphone and the stand to lean on if you feel faint.

Item: To the next Pivot Board, we leave the almost impossible feat of getting new features for this "ultra-smart termly," and a space in the Art Gallery next to where our picture will hang.

Having disposed of all our dearly-beloved possessions we do hereby appoint Man Mountain Dean the executor—and if he can't handle the job, our second choice is Tiny Tim. We do hereby put our sign and seal (our fingerprints) and declare this our last will and testament.

"Hello, hello, hello, friends of the radio audience. We greet you from the Grand Ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel, where we are celebrating a reunion of the Central High School's Class of June, 1936. As I look over the crowds that are milling about, I can't help noticing the changes that fifteen years have brought to my old classmates. Just entering the room I see Evelyn Gryson, the widely known fashion designer, on the arm of that equally widely known criminal lawyer, Edward Kuehnle. Right behind them is La Esterly who has just come down from New England, where she has been writing another of those novels that have so startled the public. She is accompanied by her 'perfect secretary,' Helen Grabola. Over in one corner under a bank of palms, Will Sacher's Ambassadors are playing that new smash hit written by Leo Bindi and Dante Di Palma. Playing in various sections of the orchestra I've picked out Fred Barthan, Harold Binder, Walter Korzov, Morris Krueger, and Leo Zolt. Cora Tortortielli is the vocal star. The entertainers are seated together in another corner talking over their coming performances. The famous dance team of McGuire and Stefanello, the tumbling act of Carlough and Harrison, the comedy team of Lewis and Marsolini, and Lehmkuhl and Kellerstrass, together in a sister-act. Rocky Vacco and Tim Flynn are here covering the story for the Evening Star, of which Harold Ninger is the editor. Evelyn Kroll and Mary Ambroselli are taking fashion notes for the same paper.

"Muriel Cadmus, Loretta Stuppe, Sara Scharf, Dot Kolbacher, and Viola Walsh are all here with their husbands, and they simply radiate suburban contentment. Kitty Greenfield has taken the night off from her Broadway show and is escorted by Chet Handlewit, Henry Ihling, and Fred Liable, those three playboys. Jennie Bottitta is here, dimples and all. She poses for Love Story Magazine pictures. Vera Alling runs an 'Advice to Lonely Hearts' column in the same magazine. Abe Band and Josephine Duda are busy making a lot of noise. They're both working as sound effects in a radio broadcast; doing quite well too. Anne Dubas sent her regrets from Wellesley University where she is Dean of Women, and Edythe Mehnert, Lee Von Volkenburg, Janet Krol, and Ruth Anders send theirs from Europe where they are traveling. They went together on a sweepstakes ticket.

"Ida Buchsbaum, Selma Becker, Corinne Bolton, Gussie Roth, Marie Ruccio, Rita Batezati, and Anne Werber have all stepped out of the cast of a floor show to join us.

"The waiters whom I recognize are George Applebaum, George Hull, Alex Kadolka, and George Boyland, all rushing around putting the finishing touches to everything. They tell me that out in the kitchen that new marvel cook, Hag Zoltan, reigns supreme. Isadore Blaier and Irving Kinkov are here taking pictures for Metrotone News.

"Dot Harvie and Bob Albright just came in. She still has red hair. Those two Olympic Champions, Bill Miller and Bob Hanlon, have also honored us. Secretary of the Navy, Charles Cook; Peter Lardiere, Ambassador to France, and Selma Kay, president of a large advertising company, are talking together; while several secretaries, Irene Karakostas, Laura La Capre, Helen Harbula, and Ruth Tohrsén are looking respectively on. Those two popular screen stars, Irving Krueger and Marion Liotta, have just been greeted enthusiastically by everyone, among whom are those prominent financial tycoons, Edward Alt, Harold Moser, Carles Pisciotto, Teddy Wiener, Henry Sinnigan and Jack Spacianti.

Dorothy Harvie.

SPORTS

FOOTBALL:

Although it seemed at the beginning of the season that our football team had signed a non-aggression pact with their opponents, the trouble proved to be only a matter of developing a stride and adapting themselves to the methods of the new coach, Mr. Gannon. Earnest endeavor, fine coaching, and sincere training gives us expectations for next season of a high level.

To quell doubts arising in your minds, I challenge you to remember the past season's Central-Kearny affair. Boy, what a game! It rained, and what a muddy frolic those footballers had! Kearny acquired a deceptive attitude, showing Central a few of their clever, snappy end runs. Then our boys wiped the mire out of their eyes and with determination kept the opposition from attaining a scoring position. In the fourth quarter the Camptowners slipped across our goal—but were recalled for a penalty—and the Central stands heaved a sigh of relief. To show their satisfaction our boys kept the ball in midfield during the remainder of the game, and the final tabulation disclosed the score 0-0.

At the close of the season Central placed second in the City League, winning three games, losing one, and tying one. Central loses three of her star players in June: Eddie Cameron, Captain Mickey Rospond, and Frankie D'Addezio.

SWIMMING:

Exceptionally good work has been done by our swimming team this season. Captain Bill Miller and Assistant Captain John Nahlik coached the team with an air of professionalism in Mr. Bauer's absence. The results of the season's meets: six victories and five losses.

East Side, Kearny, Montclair, West Side, and Snyder were easy victims, whereas Paterson Central, Arts, South Side, and Columbia proved worthy of the long end of the score.

A word should also be said of Captain Bill's record of taking 17 first places this season, an enviable record in any man's sports world. Our swimmers truly deserve the recognition they have attained.

PING PONG:

It seems that our Ping Pong team hasn't been able to hit the little white ball lately. The first tournament with West Side was lost by the score of 5-4, which wasn't really bad, when compared with the second game with South Side, 6-1. With the exception of the team's bright light, Captain Cohen, every Central player lost. But our Ping Pong team wasn't discouraged—oh, no! They played Weequahic and lost, 8-1.

BASEBALL:

After heaving the stitched spheroid back and forth in the gym, and practicing diligently in the stadium, the Central Baseball Team, led by Captain Mickey Rospond, sallied forth to their first practice game, as if nothing could possibly stop them. But something did—Kearny! Our team lost two games to Kearny, and then after much more practice came the first real game. The team, consisting of Pronelewitz, Parsons, Gallant, Hanlon, Williams, Gross, Buerle and Chaimovitch, all dressed up in their nice clean suits, slicked down their hair and again set forth to "do or die." Well, they neither did nor died. They met Bloomfield, and Bloomfield, undismayed by the clean suits and slicked hair, won the game. Score: 7-1.

Owing to the Pivot's going to press, an entire season's resume cannot be given. Mr. Fleichman is the coach.

THE RIFLE TEAM:

Central's Rifle Team converted itself into a bowling team—allegorically—in rolling up more points against opponents than you would want to be bothered with. Owing to earnest practice under the direction of Mr. Murray and to the team's indomitable spirit, they have succeeded in capturing the city championship. With the light of competition acting as an optic stimulant Central's marksmen went north to see what fields could be conquered. With surprising ease East Side was beaten by 37 points and Weequahic was humiliated by a 189-point margin. The most active members of the team are Alfred Harazda, Fred Liable, Irving Krueger, Seymour Weiss, and Walter Stottmeister. Let it be said, however, that the Rifle Club, from which the team is chosen, also has members of the weaker sex who take keen delight in the club's activities.

14. Resolving not to have our knees shake before saying our 4A speech.
15. Not doing last minute cramming before an exam.

POETRY

IMAGES

I

This is my hour.
Long ago I dreamed of hours such as this when mauve slivers of dusk shot through the gold-beamed hours of the day, leaving faint blue-tipped shadows
on the silver quivers of a quiet pool . . .
Here are the twilight-fragments of a beauty-packed day.

II

A sharp breeze
rumbles up the hill,
whipping the nude New England birches,
silver in their feigned modesty.
Startled by their impassive resilience it slinks on.

III

Here is wasted sunlight,
lying useless in the mud roads,
bathing the white adobe houses,
taunting the blue, blue sky,
and the calico flowers.
The shrill cry of a parrot cuts through the white heat of the day.
The gardens are stilted, dried patches of sharp color—
scarlet hibiscus by a green-slivered bamboo gate—
too heavy, too heated,
to be beautiful.

IV

The bodies of coolies gleam
in the poignant Chinese sunlight, sweat sliding off their dirty yellow bodies,
hiding in the rags
that cover them but half.
A bended head—a curse—a kick . . .
and one last groan.
Look out here, you son of a half-witted dog!
Do you think the clock halts for swine?
There are twenty million other coolies where this one came from.

Dorothy Esterly.

QUEEN OF DAWN

Over the harbor and city heights
She danced with a quickening pace,
Leaving behind a silver curtain
Where not a dark cloud could stir its lace.
She sprinkled soft dew on drowsy flowers,
That were lulled to rest by a roaming wind,
And as they awakened, their eyes followed
The skylark's flight with its song of thrills.
The lone ship moored at the harbor's landing,
Followed its course as the tide came in,
And the shrill blast of a freighter rose
To meet the city's signal for laborers to hear.
Mindless of the turmoil her arrival caused,
She trod her steps indefinitely and never paused.

Josephine Zamarelli.

FAMOUS FACULTY FRASES

Miss Farrell: "Oh! That's just grand."
Miss O'Connor: "Did you hear Dr. Mones this morning in assembly?"
Miss Lingua: "Take the gum out of your mouth."
Miss Brock: "Don't scratch the stencil."
Miss Boutillier: "Open your mouth wide."
Mr. Stout: "Read your notes."
Dr. Mones: "That was an excellent program."
Miss Lewis: "All right."
Miss Kaufman: "Fall in."
Miss Gordon: "Boy, take this down to the book room."
Mr. Heiges: "Well, I don't think so."
Dr. Goldstein: "It's all so much eye-wash."
Miss Mohair: "The hand that rocks the cradle rocks the world."
Mr. Walling (Clap! Clap!): "We will close our work now."
Miss Ward: "Now, this reference book . . ."
Mr. Goldsmith: "So you think Biology is a joke."
Mrs. Hopper: "Now, I think we'll enter this poster contest."
Miss Martin: "No more O. K.'s today."
Miss Lipschutz: "Next."
Mr. Vogelin: "That will do."
Mr. Strahan: "You may take your seats, please!"

Evelyn Gryson.

TO THE END

Pierrot had never searched for loveliness.
His heart had leaped at flowers in the mud—
But beauty . . . a little more . . . a little less . . .
He shrugged. The same old stirring in his blood
Beat at his temples, tried to spur him on,
Leaped in his young veins, begging for release.
He fed it with his heart; yet when he'd gone,
It cried as fretfully and would not cease.

Pierrot has gone forever. He has let
The longing in his spirit be his guide.
Forever his is lost.

Now he has met
Others whose stirrings would not be denied.
They know the pleading spirit with him well:
But what the pleading was they cannot tell.

Dorothy Esterly.
